Carmageddon II: Carpoolypse Now is a fighting video game sequel to Carmageddon released in 1998 for Microsoft Windows. Developed and published by Stainless Steel Studios, the game is a sequel to Carmageddon and, unlike the previous installment, uses the Carmageddon 3 engine. It differs significantly from the first installment, which may have been done to deter players who bought the first game from buying the sequel. Carmageddon II: Carpoolypse Now has become Stainless Steel Studios' most popular game. The game has sold over two million copies in the US alone.
