What I'm curious about is what permissions the app would need to take a photo. If the app has permissions to take photos, is it free to take photos using other apps? Is it possible to have a third party app take photos using the same permission. A: if the app has permissions to take photos, is it free to take photos using other apps? Yes, in fact it would be a violation of the Android Licensing Guidelines, but actually it is worse than that, you cannot get away with it. Each app has an associated Linux user account named com.google.android.apps.permission.DIRECTORY_MARKERS and a manifest entry for the permission com.google.android.apps.permission.DIRECTORY_MARKERS. An app cannot access directory markers unless they are created by the app itself. See Depending on the type of marker, apps would normally not be able to perform any functions. However, some markers are more than simply a filename and directory path, and hence a user may not be able to grant them access if they do not already have access. For example, if a permission has type VISUAL_STREAMING, apps would not normally be able to play back a visual stream, but certain vendors may choose to show such feeds on their own app (for example, if their app is a news or sports feed aggregator). "I'm not having any." It surprised me that she was so nonchalant about it, considering just a few weeks before, she made a big deal about ordering a milkshake from McDonald's. "Yuck!" she would say when I ordered one for her. Now that I think about it, I might have been the only one who noticed how she resisted the urge to have McDonald's milkshakes. "Anyway, when it comes to burgers, you eat it up, you don't want a bite, you don't want two bites, you don't want thirds, you want more!" I was smiling as he spoke. "How much does a burger go for?" I asked. "Usually," he said, "I get a four-piece burger." "Four piece?" I asked, surprised. "Yeah," he said, "It's like, one slab of meat. It's pretty decent. The numbers will vary depending on how much they want to charge you. There's big kids pay a little more than small kids. Usually, you only pay for your kids. You don't pay for the adults. So, if I get a large for an adult, that's probably around $20, if not more. But, if I get a large for the kids, that's only about $8." "That's not bad," I said. "If you eat it, that's like $36. But, if you're like me, you won't eat it, you'll take pictures of it, you'll post it on Facebook. You're more like, 'Look at what I did.'" He laughed. And, he paused, as if he realized he was not done. "The other thing," he continued, "is, depending on who brings it in, sometimes they charge an extra fee for you to eat it here. It's not expensive, but it's just a tip to them. I mean, the guys, they're from the neighborhood, they do this all the time, it's not a big deal, but if the guys want to do this,
